"Importing Disease."

Under the above head the San Francisco papers speak in plain terms in censure of Capt. Connelly, of the steamship Colorado, which arrived from Hongkong, via Yokohama, on the 19th, bringing an addition of nearly 900 to the Celestial population to this Coast. And, as if this in itself was not bad enough, that dreaded scourge, the smallpox, had manifested itself among the poor coolies during the voyage, its ravages having been allayed apparently but a few days before the vessel reached port. But notwithstanding this added circumstance to render the arrival an unwelcome one, the commander availed himself of the early hour at which he entered the Golden Gate to avoid the Health Officer, and disregarding all the well-known health regulations of the port, actually took his vessel with its living cargo of infected Chinese to the Pacific Mail Company's wharf, thus imperiling the health of the entire community.

This glaring violation of law and utter contempt of the health ordinances and regulations of the port were promptly reported to the Board of Health when that body very properly ordered legal proceedings to be commenced at once against both the commander of the ship and the Pacific Mail Company. It is hoped that these proceedings will be vigorously prosecuted, and that the utmost penalty will be inflicted. The present condition of our laws unfortunately permits of no punishment for the persistent introduction of moral disease brought to our shores in these ship-loads of heathen Chinese and purchased slaves; but when to that unpunishable offense is added another, lighter in reality, but which the laws do recognize as an offense, and one which, in its consequences to the community, may be very serious, there should be no leniency extended.

The Pacific Mail Steamship Company, in defiance of the universal sentiment of all reputable, intelligent and christian citizens of this coast, persists in deluging us with Asiatic degradation, vice and misery. There is no law to prevent this, and as it is a profitable business for this soulless corporation they follow it with all the enterprise they can command, precisely as Eastern shipmasters of a century ago followed the African slave trade in defiance of the better sentiment of the country. But when to degradation, vice and misery, they add pestilence and contagion to their invoices, and then defy the laws of the land, and presume to discharge the whole rocking mass into the very heart of a populous city, no punishment that may be authorized by law can be too severe to inflict upon them.

Oregon City.

We regret to see our old home—Oregon's first city—the pioneer birth place of printing on the Pacific coast—Oregon City—waning on the Centennial year of American independence, but the following from the Enterprise yesterday, shows that the people there must not slumber if they propose to prosper. The Enterprise says: "Oregon city has sustained another blow aimed at her material prosperity, by the taking off of the steamer E. N. Cooke, which has plied between here and Portland. Almost from time immemorial our citizens have had daily connection with the metropolis by boat, which has been of great benefit to the community and has been exclusively patronized by our freighters, while the travel has been more evenly divided between the railroad and steamboat. It behooves us as citizens to see to it immediately, that a boat built by the citizens for this trade shall at once be commenced and sustained, as the convenience of shippers—not to say the danger of being harmed by inimical freight tariffs by the powerful corporations that are seemingly to control the transportation routes hereafter—demand that each business man and property holder shall conjointly take steps to protect these interests now seemingly in peril. We understand it is the intention that the boats of the O. S. N. Co. line will touch here occasionally when they are hailed, but no spasmodic service every second or third day will answer.

"Here is a town with two of the largest flouring mills in the State having a capacity of sixty tons of freight per day. A woolen mill, whose freightage will also count considerable; the tub factory and the Alden Fruit Drying Company, all adding their quota to business, besides the numerous extensive orchards between here and Portland, and the Oswego Iron Works whose manufacture aggregates ten tons per day,—counting all these streams of commerce, it appears plain to us that there would be no difficulty in sustaining a daily service between here and Portland; the interest of our city demands it, and a little conjoint effort on the part of our citizens will secure it for us, beyond a doubt. The Centennial year must not usher in the era of Oregon City retrocession and decay, unless it is confessed that all ambition and enterprise have died out from among her citizens."

—C. W. Holt, Esq., special correspondent of the Alameda Encinal, California, paid our office a professional visit on Saturday. Mr. H. proceeded to Shoalwater bay this morning, in connection with work of the 13th Light-house District and will remain until some proposed improvements are completed. He is a very companionable gentleman, and we shall be pleased to receive visits from him frequently.
